Notes:

1. Just a typical see-saw April. The first half was on the warm side and the latter half cooler. A few days with measurable snow were scattered through the month. Winds were a bit less than usual for a spring month. Temperatures averaged 47.2°F, 0.9° above normal. The warmest day was 79°F on the 10th. Precipitation totaled 3.38", 0.65" above normal. There was some rainfall on 16 of the 30 days. Snowfall at 4.7" was 0.8" above normal. Early leaf-out was coated with 2.8" of snow over 20-21 April.

2. General comments are still complicated by the effects of the corona-virus restrictions and data gathering related to NY BBA III, with its year-round data dumping into the BBA portal. The eBird download for the month for this region was about 66,401 lines, compared with 72,406 in April 2020, probably a change within the noise level. The spring seemed advanced until shut down a bit by the cooler latter half month. Species numbers for the month and year to date were very close to last year. There was a nice mix of expected arrivals plus a few rarities.

3. Among the waterfowl, we have the usual - essentially all expected species recorded. Again, there was clear feeling that the bulk of the migrants had moved on by early in this month. Peak counts were low, especially for diving ducks. Nothing stood out as an especially high count. Waterfowl gathering and counts in the NMWMA area in Wayne County were limited by low water. This story continued for the grebes, though, again, there were some good Red-necked Grebe counts from Hamlin Beach. An Eared Grebe was reported off Greece later in the month, photographed by Mitchell Barry.

4. Late in the month Eastern Whip-poor-will showed up in the usual Manitou Beach area and elsewhere. Our regular marsh birds were reported at typical arrival dates, but low numbers without easy viewing in the NMWMA. Again, Sandhill Crane numbers, passing the hawk watch and elsewhere at other expected locations, were good. With water levels on Lake Ontario back to more normal, even below average, there was good shorebird habitat at lakeshore sites, but birds seemed slow to arrive. Another spring, sixth in a row, with Piping Plover stopping at the barrier beach at Braddock Bay this time was another nice surprise. There were no other exceptional shorebirds.

5. The gulls and terns were again generally at routine numbers and arrival dates. Bonaparte's Gull numbers were low, and unsurprisingly there were no reports of Little Gull or the other rare gull species that often accompany them. The last of the winter gulls were relative scarce. Among the terns, Black Tern again had not arrived in our region at month's end, and the other regular terns were found in below average numbers.

6. Numbers for both our regular loon species were low. Double-crested Cormorant increased through the month, especially in Irondequoit Bay just south of the bay bridge, where hard to count. An American White Pelican circled near Braddock Bay on the 22nd but did not linger. Great Egrets hung around the Braddock Bay area most of the latter half of the month to be joined by a Snowy Egret on the 28th. Glossy Ibis was reported in the NMWMA, at Braddock Bay, and near Spencerport, sometimes seen by many. The lone Black Vulture was seen the hawk watch on the 2nd.

7. Hawk watch numbers are so driven by weather details, that comparisons year to year probably mean little. That said, a quick summary is that for April, most species were 20-50% higher this year over last other than all the falcons down, Golden Eagle about the same, and Rough-legged Hawk up. Year to date for the two years, numbers for most species are relatively close, again other than the falcons well down, especially American Kestrel, Broad-winged Hawk way down, and Rough-legged Hawk up. Turkey Vultures again doubled Broad-winged Hawks for the month. Ten days saw 1000-bird counts, more than double that for last year. Lots more fun details are presented in the Hawkcount site online. The DEC owl surveys produced double digit Short-eared Owls through the final count on the 27th. Jim Adams' data summarizing the owl counting at the "Owl Woods" area on Manitou Beach Road showed the big start for N. Saw-whet Owls dropping off to only 8 added this month, while Long-eared Owls added 14 more birds. The Northern Flicker movement was noted again at the hawk watch and passing Beechwood SP in Wayne County; peaks 51 and 147, respectively.

8. The BBBO banding numbers appeared to about double last year's for the month, with about 40% more net hours. But looking at the details, most of that increase was from Black-capped Chickadee moving from a down to an up year with bands from 1 to 505. Ruby-crowned Kinglet was up and Golden-crowned down to account for most of the rest of the difference. Yellow-rumped Warbler was the only warbler species with > 5 banded at 22. With the cool last half of the month, many of the late April arrivals just made it in the warm last couple of days or slipped into May. Warbler species banded jumped to seven, however, the total of 18 warbler species reported by month's end was the same as last April. Five passerine species arrived at dates early by the old (1984) summary, but none were actually record early, all having been reported earlier yet in the intervening years. Again, the species that often pass in large numbers, such as Blue Jay, American Crow, and American Robin, were not tallied in sizable numbers this month. There were really no outstanding passerine counts and no truly rare species, a White-eyed Vireo being the rarest. There were no glaring misses, just a number of species that sometimes arrive before May 1 that didn't this year.

9. Please send your reports by the 5th of the month to Andrea Patterson, 144 Greystone Lane, #24, Rochester, NY 14618.
